Every Fall,

families transition from summer break to back-to-school routines. They move from making s'mores to packing lunches. We shift our mindsets and make room for new schools, jobs, and schedules. Fall is a time when we say goodbye to the old and move into something new.

Help your family find purpose as you head back to school this fall with our Great Back to School Family Guide.

7 Important Tips when Transitioning Back to School

Celebrate the End of Summer

Sometimes it's hard to leave the fun of summer. As a family, plan some time to celebrate summer. Talk about your favorite memories and activities. As you look back, begin chatting about all the things you're looking forward to in the upcoming year.

Go to Bed Earlier

Kids tend to go to bed and wake up later during the summer. This can make for a rough transition during the first week or so of school as they suddenly have to wake up early. Begin the habit of going to bed earlier at least one week before the start of school.

Everyone will be a little less cranky during the first few weeks of school if they are well-rested.

Have Patience

Whether you like it or not, the new school year will create new habits for your family. It'll take time to figure out how to navigate your new schedule. Mentally prepare for this transitional time. Give yourself and everyone in your family grace. Be prepared with quick meals and the phone number of your favorite pizza place.

Plan with Purpose

Before your year begins, make a plan for your family priorities. School activities, sports, and community events can quickly consume all of your time. Before you say yes to anything, pause and make sure you're saying yes to the right things. Remember, it's ok to say no.

Celebrate the Good

As the school year begins, take time to celebrate as a family. Celebrate the start of new things. Encourage your children as they settle into new classrooms, learn new schedules, and begin to make new friends. Ice cream is always a good friend for celebrations.

Prioritize your Faith

When your schedule gets busy, it's easy for time devoted to your faith to fall away. When we put God first in our life, all of our other priorities begin to fall into place appropriately. As you prepare for fall, make sure to prioritize your faith and church.

Practice Eating as a Family

Eating together as a family is an important practice as you begin the school year. It's a great way to pause and connect with each other. It's ok if your meal is made up of chicken nuggets or cereal. It's not about what you eat, it's about prioritizing consistent time together as a family.

FUN

first Week of School traditions

Fun family traditions are a great way to make the start of school special. Consider trying some (or all) of the following first week of school traditions.

Donate Extra School Supplies

When shopping for school supplies, consider buying extra and donating them to your school. Before you go shopping, ask your kids for help in picking out the extra items to donate.

Special Breakfast

Celebrate the first day of school with a special breakfast. This can be anything you know your kids will love- from pancakes to doughnuts, to that one sugary cereal they're always begging you to buy.

Record a Video

Each year, record a short video of your kids' first day of school. Keep it around a minute, asking them their age and what they're looking forward to in school this year.

Take a First (and last) Day of School Photo

Make a sign that says "First Day of 'X' Grade" and take their picture. Nothing captures how much children grow each year more than a first and last day of school photo.

Special Packed Lunch

In the first week of school, add something special to your kids' lunches. It could be notes of encouragement, extra snacks, a random toy, or anything that would add some excitement to their day.

Family Fall Goals

As a family, think through and discuss the goals you'd like to set for the fall. Check-in on your goals at the end of your first month of school.
